

SPRING NEWSLETTER SEPTEMBER 2008

THE MARKET

Despite the downturn in the economy the art market has received very good press this year. The art market is one of the few markets which has held up in an economy under siege no less. Gallery sales have held up so far compared to last year. It is heartening to hear of strong sales for art internationally against economic woes similar to those experienced here. A Fernand Leger painting recently sold in New York for over 50 million New Zealand dollars, a Damien Hurst for even more. Record prices for many other artists have also been achieved this year. We are experiencing consistent sales overseas, particularly to the USA and Europe and although the international market is also under severe pressure, the exchange rate still favours the overseas buyer.

LOCAL SALES

We have negotiated three large sales to public institutions recently which include a major Robyn Kahukiwa to the Auckland City Art Gallery and a second work of Robyn's to the Gisborne Museum. A fine Nigel Brown has also sold to the Waikato Museum. Liam Barr's work, Ten Cent Mix, from his latest exhibition "Grand-Land" has just sold to a top private Auckland school.
